Feedback on team dynamics

1. How effectively did your team work?

Overall, the team worked reasonably well considering that most members had significant professional commitments alongside their studies. Communication within the group remained constructive, and team members generally responded when input or feedback was required.

Although coordinating schedules was sometimes challenging due to work obligations, the group managed to progress steadily by sharing ideas, reviewing each other's contributions, and dividing tasks where necessary. Each member contributed in their own way, which allowed the project to move forward and reach a coherent final outcome.

2. Were there any behaviours of your team members which were particularly valuable or detrimental to the team? Explain.

One particularly valuable aspect of the team dynamic was the willingness of members to contribute their perspectives and technical input during discussions. Even when availability was limited due to professional commitments, team members remained supportive and engaged with the project.

From my perspective, my own professional experience working in teams and leadership roles helped in structuring discussions and keeping focus on the objectives of the assignment. This experience made it easier to maintain clarity around technical decisions and ensure the work remained aligned with the requirements.

No behaviours were significantly detrimental to the team. As is common in part-time postgraduate programmes where most students have demanding jobs, time constraints occasionally limited the speed of collaboration. However, this did not prevent the group from completing the work in a cooperative and respectful manner.

3. What did you learn about working in a team from this project that you will carry into your next group/team experience?

This project reinforced the importance of flexibility and clear communication when working in teams where members have different professional schedules and commitments. Establishing a clear structure early in the process and maintaining open communication helps prevent misunderstandings and keeps the work progressing.

Another key lesson was the value of diverse experience within a team. Members approached the problem from different professional backgrounds, which improved the overall quality of the final work. Different people see different things.

In future team projects, I will continue to emphasise structured collaboration, early clarification of responsibilities, as these practices contribute significantly to teamwork.
